Starting October 2012

The Department of Asian and African Studies in the Faculty of Arts, University of Ljubljana, was established in October 1995. Chinese Studies and Japanese Studies are the two full-major study programs ever since the time of establishment. With the restructuring of university study programs three years ago, we have started with an additional undergraduate study program East Asian Culture under which we are introducing the “Korean module”. The Korean language has been taught in our department as an extra facultative subject since 2003-2004. The Korean language courses (Korean I, Korean II, Korean III) have been extremely popular among students in Slovenia. Now we are in the phase of establishing a full-major undergraduate program of Korean Studies. The new program of Korean Studies will provide a good and solid foundation of Korean language, Korean history, literature and philosophy, together with the existing general introductions of Asian history, art and culture, and methodology of intercultural research.
